Cleveland will be represented in the International classic by the balloon "City of Cleveland."

Drawing for positions in the race beginning Labor Day, will be made at a banquet and reception to be tendered the contestants here August 30.

The pilots prefer to draw last position, according to Captain W. J. Wood, who is in charge of race operations. The reason for this preference is that the heat of the early afternoon causes the gas bags to expand, lowering the efficiency of the ship, and causing a handicap in attaining distance.

W. P. McCracken, former assistant of commerce for aeronautics will be the toastmaster at the banquet, L. W. Greve, president of the Cleveland chapter of the National Aeronautic Association will preside. The welcoming address will be delivered by Mayor John W. Marshall.

For the protection of the Public the Coal Dealers Unit of the CREDIT ASS'N OF BUCKS COUNTY several weeks ago requested the Pennsylvania Department of Weights and Measures to conduct a through check on all coal dealers delivering coal in Bucks County. For the past ten days inspectors have been working with the county inspector with the result a thorough check-up has been made.

The result of this investigation has been very gratifying to UNIT DEALERS who have always been co-operating for honest deliveries, and the public can be proud of their record.

Every UNIT DEALER will at all times have on his truck a delivery ticket calling for the exact number of pounds of coal being delivered for the protection of their customers and to help these inspectors make a very close check whenever they are in the county.

McLees will return to the Cornwells school and have charge of Grades 3 and 4, and Miss Verna M. Giles, Jernyn, a graduate of the Mansfield State Teachers' College, will succeed Miss Helen Andrews in charge of Grade 5. Miss Mary G. Haldeman, of Southampton, a graduate of Temple University, will be assigned to the sixth grade room, Grades 5 and 6, therefore, will be taught in departmentalized fashion by Miss Giles and Miss Haldeman.

In the Cornwells Heights building the following teachers have signed contracts to return and assume the same or practically the same duties as of last term. They are, Miss Cecilia Snyder, Anson M. Hamm, Miss N. Olive Sargeant, Miss Jane M. Kohler, Miss Alice K. Siddons, Guye W. Miller, Miss Emily E. Schroeder and Miss Alma I. Klink.

Miss Elsie N. Jennings, a graduate of Temple University, will succeed Miss Ruth S. Hansen, in charge of physical education for girls. Miss Eleanor M. Professor Luigi Valeno, of Lansdale, who has been so successful in organizing and instructing the band, will return again to that work.

The authorities in Bensalem township are busy now renovating and improving the schools of the township. It is their object to make the schools and grounds a most inviting environment for the youth of the community. Aside from the usual renovations which take place annually, in all the schools, the following additional work is being done.

The Penn Valley School is receiving a new coat of paint on its interior and exterior. A new Page fence will be erected about the Eddington school, and the grounds adjacent to the Cornwells School are being improved. Work has begun on that project and, no doubt, will be completed for the opening of school on September 4th. A new cement walk and curb will also be built in front of the Cornwells School, and several of the old and useless trees will be removed from the grounds.

Each year a number of students who have been in attendance elsewhere are enrolled. It is desired that these new pupils, whether they will enroll in the high school or in the grades, shall present their credentials previous to the opening of school. Parents and guardians should exert every effort to have their children enrolled previous to the opening of school on September 4th, at the office in the Cornwells building. A corps of teachers will be present in the Cornwells school on Tuesday to assist the supervising principal in receiving and registering all new students residing in the township. This also applies to all tuition students residing in neighboring school districts who desire to attend the Bensalem township high school. Each new student should bring with him his transfer card from the school last attended, a vaccination certificate and a certificate of birth.

Mrs. LeRoy Mathias, who has been spending the summer with her husband who resides at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Kline, of 1221 Pond street, will return to her home in Cumberland, Maryland, on Friday. Mr. Mathias will accompany his wife to their home in Cumberland and will remain over the week end and Labor Day.

SCHOOL BELL READY TO RING NEXT WEEK

Hundreds Of Children In Lower Bucks Co. Awaits
Call Back To Book

LARGE ENROLLMENT

Courses of study that have been interrupted for a short time will be resumed next week by school children of Bristol and those in the surrounding towns and townships.

Several hundred additional pupils will enter the school room this Fall, and scores will become students in the high school buildings of the section.

Some of the youngsters will go back to their books in a reluctant manner, while others will take up the routine perfunctorily as one of the annoyances of life, while still others will take up the broken threads of study with more enthusiasm.

It is expected that the enrollment day, Tuesday, at Bristol public schools will see several new pupils, beginners and those that are moving into the territory from other places, or being transferred. Teachers will be at their respective buildings, there to receive the new students. At the same time it is expected many parents will go to the school buildings to confer with the instructors of their children regarding the latter's work. Beginners' permits are being issued to all tots who will be six years of age before next January 1st. Those who will not be six until after January 1st, 1931 will be admitted during the third week of September, providing their work is good.

In the township schools this year W. J. Kines, the new supervising principal, will be in charge. These schools open sessions on Tuesday, the 2nd. Practically the entire first day, however, will be given over to organization and regular classes will get under way the following day. This includes grades at the Crofton, Edgely, Laurel Bend, Newportville, Maple Shade, and Emille and Badger buildings.

Approximately 1250 pupils are expected to be enrolled for Morrisville public schools when the fall and winter term opens on Wednesday. The faculty includes seven new teachers, six in the high school, and one in the grades.

Sessions during the first week will be held from nine until one o'clock, and the second week full sessions will take place.

Part of the new addition to the Robert Morris School, Morrisville, will be used, when classes commence. The entire structure is expected to be ready for use within the next month. Addition has seven class rooms, shops for manual training, a library, activities room and conference room. A gymnasium will be completed within another month. L. Young, of Millersville State Teachers' College, and Franklin and Marshall College, will teach geography, health and penmanship in grades six, seven and eight; and William Barbour, a graduate of Shippensburg State Teachers' College, will instruct in science, history and athletics at the high school.

In the Hulmeville schools this year there is but one change in the faculty with E. H. Burd, of Harrisburg, acting as teaching principal, and taking the place left vacant by W. J. Kines who is now supervising principal of Bristol Township schools. Sessions at Hulmeville commence on Tuesday, September 2nd. School building has been thoroughly cleaned, and renovated. Young People's Branch of W. C. T. U. Meets At Pickering Home — Youth Disregards Broken Arm And Saves Child From Drowning—Cochrans Entertain Family At Upper Black Eddy

LANGHORNE, Aug. 30.—The Young People's Branch of the W. C. T. U. met at the home of Mrs. H. Pickering with Miss Gladys Harper, secretary of Bucks County Y. P. B., present. There are six charter members in the Y. P. B., but it is expected to increase the membership rapidly.

Lester Mather was elected president, Curtis Sealy, vice-president; Jacqueline Roberts, secretary; Viola Carter, treasurer.

The Y. P. B. has many departments: evangelistic work and moral education, citizenship, narcotic, flower mission, soldier and sailor, public meetings, contest and publicity, music and social.

The next meeting is to be held at the home of Lester Mather, across from the Langhorne Library, on Monday evening, September 8, at 8 p. m. All young people interested are cordially invited to come.

MORRISVILLE, Aug. 30.—Disregarding his arm that was broken in a fall from a horse two weeks ago, Charles Stiener, 15 years old, of Hillside avenue, Morrisville, leaped into the Pennsylvania Canal Monday evening and saved Clifford Weurpel, 6-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Weurpel, of East Franklin street, Morrisville, from drowning.

This is reported to be the third person young Stiener has saved from drowning in the past six years.

According to stories told by eye witnesses, the youngster was playing on an improvised wharf when he lost his balance and fell into the stream. Several women who were nearby saw the child struggling in the water and screamed for help.

When Stiener heard their cries he rushed from his home, which is close by the canal, and without stopping to remove any clothing, plunged into the stream. Young Weurpel had sunk by this time, and it was necessary for Stiener to grope about the bottom before he finally got hold of the youngster.

With the assistance of John Beatty, 43 years old, of Hillside avenue, he hauled the child out of the water. Several women who had gathered about the edge of the canal, grew hysterical as the boy was placed upon the bank for first-aid treatment. Weurpel responded quickly and after a short time was able to go home.

UNRIVALED LANDSCAPE FOUND IN VIRGINIA

Scenic Tour Makes Delightful Journey For Motorists

900 MILES FROM HERE

Unrivaled scenic landscape makes a motor tour through historic regions of Virginia always a most delightful vacation trip. For this reason the Keystone Automobile Club has outlined a motor journey to this section of the "Old Dominion that ill provide either an excellent week end outing or a more extended vacation trip. From Bristol the approximate distance is 900 miles.

"From almost any central point the trip can be halted and the home-ward journey started over excellent highways that form a network in this section," says Russell B. Carty, representative of the club. "The tour leads through the national capital area to the picturesque James River region; into the Piedmont country; to the warm springs resorts and into the rugged Shenandoah Valley. Ever changing landscape free from monotony makes this tour one long to be remembered."

From Bristol the tour leads over the Lincoln Highway and City Line avenue, to Llanerch, turn left on Lansdowne avenue to Lansdowne, here Baltimore Pike marked as U. S. Route 1, is met. Turn left on U. S. Route 122 just beyond Concordville and continue on to Wilmington. Here U. S. Route 13 is met and followed to State Road where bearing to the right the travelers pass into U. S. Route 40 which is used through Elkton to Perryville. Here the Susquehanna River is crossed to Havre de Grace and the river continues through Aberdeen to Baltimore. From here U. S. Route 1 is followed to Washington, D. C.

The capital city with its numerous places of interest, a visit to Washington's home at Mt. Vernon and the historic surrounding territory, should not be omitted. Southward over U. S. Route 1 the trail leads through countryside dotted with monuments and tablets recalling historic episodes in various communities passed. In Frederickburg still stand many buildings connected with the Colonial and Civil War times, among them the house where Washington's mother lived and died. Through historic and scenic Caroline county the same highway leads to Richmond, the Virginia state capital bearing countless mementoes of the time when this proud city was also the capital of the Confederacy.

Eastward from Richmond, U. S. Route 60 leads through the James River country to Williamsburg and Jamestown and the scene of Cornwallis' surrender at Yorktown. At the extreme tip of the peninsula lies Fort Mifflin. Here the James River can be crossed to Norfolk, or at Newport News a bridge crosses Hampton Roads connecting with state route 10 leading to Historic Petersburg. From Norfolk a delightful side trip can be taken to Virginia Beach, one of the most popular shore resorts in the south. From Petersburg state route 10, which combines in many sections with U. S. Route 60, can be followed through the Piedmont section containing many shrines of the Civil War conflict. Through Blackstone and Appomattox the journey reaches Lynchburg lying in a mountain pass formed by the James River and having as a (Continued on Page 4)

Rev. Arthur F. Gibson, rector of Eddington Episcopal Church, announced (Continued on Page 4)

Claude S. Wetherill, 54, Doylestown, was killed this morning in an automobile crash which occurred at the intersection of Hulmeville and Durham Roads.

Wetherill was driving from Bristol to Doylestown, unaccompanied. His son, George Wetherill, a Doylestown high school student, preceded him in another car, and did not learn of the accident until he reached his home.

Wetherill's car, a heavy sedan, and a car driven by Nelson W. Wagner, 51 Prospect avenue, Princeton, N. J., collided at the road intersection. According to Wagner, both he and Wetherill attempted to avoid colliding, and Wetherill's car swerved to the left, striking a pole, and then overturned.

According to Wagner, Wetherill was alive when he reached his side, and the Doylestown man in response to a question asked by Wagner, replied that he was hurt. Wetherill was brought to the Harriman Hospital in the private ambulance of Roscoe L. Horner.

Wagner was a student at Princeton, and graduated last year, receiving his A. B. degree. His home address is Leatherwood Lane, Wheeling, West Virginia.

Wagner accompanied the injured man to the Harriman Hospital, and was turned over to Corporal Budihaus of the Langhorne Motor Patrol.

Both Wetherill's car and that of Wagner were considerably damaged by the collision.

Hosiery Valued at $2,600 Stolen From Davisville Mill

Information regarding the theft of a quantity of women's silk hose from the Dawn Knitting Mills at Davisville was made public today, the goods taken being valued at $2,600.

State police of the Doylestown barracks have been working on the case for several days, and it is the belief of the management that the robbery occurred over the past week end, sometime between Saturday night and Monday morning.

Those securing the loot evidently gained an entrance through a rear window into the room where goods are stored ready for shipment. The hosiery taken totaled 274 dozen pairs, and were undyed. The goods were packed ready to be forwarded to the dyer's.

No definite trace of the goods or thieves has been found as yet, although some suspects are expected to be questioned within the next few days.

Today in History:

Washington retreated from Long Island—1776.

Mr. Wetherill was a very prominent Bucks Countyman, and while his home was located in Doylestown he was well known and highly respected throughout the county. He was engaged in the coal and building material business in Doylestown for years, and established a branch of his business here in Bristol several years ago, the Bristol business being managed by his two sons, who reside on North Radcliffe street.

The deceased had been very successful in business.

The success of the late Mr. Wetherill was due not only to his natural ability, but to perseverance, courtesy, genial manners and honest dealing with his fellow-men. He was born May 3, 1876, in Lansdale, Montgomery Co., a son of Vicensa and Mary (Martin) Wetherill. The father, who engaged in the manufacture of farm implements, was fairly prosperous and the son was reared amid happy surroundings, with good educational opportunities, and judicious guidance in morals and industry. His education was supplied by the public schools of Philadelphia and the Doylestown High School, he graduating from the latter institution in 1892.

Having a desire to engage in commercial life, Claude S. Wetherill, found employment as a traveling salesman with a sporting goods house of Philadelphia, and continued in that line a few years. For a period of ten years he was employed as manager by Bowker & Bowker, dealers in men's furnishings, Philadelphia. In 1909 he established lumber and coal yards in Doylestown and since that time conducted a very successful business, due to his courteous and fair dealing, and his never failing good nature and sociability. His gregarious instincts and congenial nature were indicated by membership in numerous fraternal and benevolent societies, including the Free Masons—Blue Lodge, Chapter, Commandery, Consistory and Shrine in which order he attained the position of Commander; the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks; Loyal Order of Moose; Independent Order of Odd Fellows; and the Doylestown Country Club.

The deceased was a member of the Presbyterian Church of Doylestown, a worthy example of upright manhood and a supporter of Christian civilization.

Politically, Mr. Wetherill was a Republican, but he sought no public honors, being content to pursue the course of his own affairs leaving public concerns to those whose tastes led them along that line.

Mr. Wetherill was married in 1898 to Dora M. Morris, daughter of Evan and Henrietta Morris, of Doylestown. There are three children, namely: Park Morris, Claude Scott and George Hotchkiss. His mother also survives.

WORLD PROBLEMS

These are harsh times for the farmer—for the weak, ruinous times—but agriculture will ultimately emerge from them the stronger for the experience. Fire proves gold, adversity men.

If the farm crisis has taught any lesson, it is that agriculture is a world industry and that prices and production must be viewed from a world standpoint.

The American wheat surplus became unmanageable when other countries produced wheat surpluses. The wheat price level is based not on American production and consumption, but upon world supply and demand. A similar situation prevails with respect to almost every other product of the soil. Cotton, rubber, corn, sugar, coffee, cocoa, tobacco, citrus fruits and other crops are priced at what the world pays, and the American farm problem is made the more acute in that any limitation of American production is apt to be followed by an increase in foreign production. But for the tariff this would have a depressive effect on the American price level.

The tariff can protect against foreign competition but it can do nothing against price-smashing surpluses.

Being a world problem, the case of agriculture should be tackled on a world scale. But that is a large order, not even American agriculture being able up to this time to cooperate.

BRAID AND DIPLOMATS

The American Foreign Service Association's suggestion that American diplomats don a uniform at official functions abroad ought to be as popular with Ambassador Dawes as some of those senate rules and prerogatives.

We can imagine him, when the movement reached his ears, thrusting his violin under his chin and improvising a rhapsody on the crimes of these evil days. And if he didn't use the name of his girl friend—Helen Maria—in vain we miss another guess.

That suggestion about uniforming the men in the foreign service was advanced most earnestly by the association. If rebels at the shocking thought of an ambassador appearing in public in the daytime in formal evening attire, and can never forget the sight of George Harvey appearing in silken knee breeches. Perhaps it forsores the day when Ambassador Dawes or some other dignitary will perform promenade in Dartmouth shorts for lack of a military-looking uniform.

There is hardly more likelihood of General Dawes adopting brass buttons, gold braid and the sword and plumes than that he will ultimately be converted or reconciled to knee breeches. Nor is it conceivable that the government will look favorably upon this proposal and cover its diplomats with sashes and swords.

Democratic America has no need for pomp and show. They belong to autocrats and dictators and that nobility which is noble in name only.

The boy of today seems to want to leave auto tracks on the sands of time instead of footprints.

The world of Jerry March, a model with beauty and brains, goes away when one roommate runs off with the young son of the owner of the department store where they work. About the oldest married a flashy pick-up. As the last straw, Tony, the owner's eldest son, whom Jerry believed to be a different person to be not so very and, after a bet at his club, persists in his attentions.

CHAPTER 12

Twenty-Two Dollar Stockings.

It was a very hot summer. Unusually hot, the papers said, just as they had said every year within the memory of the oldest inhabitant. Down at Jardine's, the two staples of midsummer conversation had been taken out of their wrappings by all the smart-aleck clerks and dusted afresh: "Well, hot enough for you?" and "It ain't the heat—it's the humidity." Sometimes Jerry vowed that she would scream the next time someone stopped her and made either statement. But she doubted whether she could manage anything as hearty as a scream. She was too tired these days.

The roomers frankly sat on the front steps and tried to find a breath of freshness in the muggy air. The children trooped around a hurdy-gurdy and whined upwards for coins. Women leaned out of the windows and exchanged with each other the latest news about the heat.

"There ain't a breath of air—my clothes are just stickin' to me."

"I never seen such a year for mosquitoes—they're as big as horseflies."

And a child's voice shrieked above everything else: "Mama! Mama! Throw me a nickel for a cone!"

That was the landlady's urchin.

"You never said a truer word, sister," the man said

Jerry knew because she heard him hours of all hours of the day and night, followed by Mrs. Hinkel's usual scream as she threw down the needle! "You'll make yourself sick, Junior! Look out it don't go down the sewer."

Mrs. Hinkel was a blousy, bleached blonde. Like her house she had certain pretensions. Often she wore corsets. She boasted of the respectability of her lodgers and kept a keen look-out to see whether their affairs interfered with any of the vaunted rules of her house. Jerry tried to hang her pictures one by one, with as much secrecy as possible, because Mrs. Hinkel was adamant about the rights of the landlady to insist that nails should not be hammered in walls.

It hardly seemed that Mrs. Hinkel could distinguish above the yells of the children, the rumble of trucks, the growling of the elevated and all the evening hubbub of a Manhattan street, the faint tap-tap that came from Jerry's room. She did, however. And, not standing on ceremony, she went straight to Jerry's door and threw it open.

Jerry hastily slipped her nail into her mouth, hid the hammer behind her.

"Are those nails, Miss March?" demanded the landlady.

"No," said Jerry innocently, "just thumb tacks."

"Oh, that's all right, dearie." A long sigh of relief. Mrs. Hinkel seemed to take her intrusion as another right. She liked little chats with her lodgers. Only this one was so disappointingly reserved. Time and time again she had tried to break the ice, with no success, but the motto of Mrs. Hinkel's type is "If at first you don't succeed, try, try, again."

So she seized this chance to inspect the room.

"You've fixed it real home-like, dearie, since you've been here," she beamed graciously.

"The way I feel," Mrs. Hinkel went on with effusive good-nature, "is make your roomers happy—by the way, listen, dearie, I got something to tell you. I don't want to forget it because I know a girl would like to hear it—Mr. Carter, third floor front—he's a process server and that's a real influential job—he thinks you're pretty nice—he'd like to take you out."

By the simp on Mrs. Hinkel's face, Jerry understood that it was neither the nails or the calendars which had lured the landlady on but the prospect of promoting the interest of the process server. Was she never to be free from that sort of thing? She detested the landlady's oily face.

Her voice became freezing. "Thanks, Mrs. Hinkel—but I'm avoiding process servers this season."

"Have it your own way," Mrs. Hinkel looked miffed, shrugged her fat shoulders. But from the door she fired one parting shot. "That ain't right, dearie—a pretty girl like you ought to have plenty of friends."

And she went out with a fat sniff.

No sooner had the door closed on her, however, than Jerry heard her voice again conferring with another voice, directing: "Miss March? Right in there, dearie." That other voice sent a start of recognition through Jerry, caused her to rush to her door.

The next instant she was hugging Frankie and Frankie was hugging her. Their voices mingled in delighted exclamations: "Frankie!" "Jerry darling!" "Where have you been?" "Why did you move?"

"Frankie!" Jerry cried again, holding her at arms length and looking her over from head to foot. Since that night of the impromptu wedding, Jerry had spoken to her former roommate over the telephone, but somehow she and Frankie had never been able to meet. Martin Sanderson's business seemed to take him away so often and when they were in town his bride's evenings were always full.

The same old Frankie—in spite of the highly polished fingernails, the immaculate slippers and the gown that proclaimed its Parisian background, in spite of the veneer of grooming—just Frankie with the same rebellious twist to her mouth and the same defiant glint in her eye.

"What a wild goose chase I've been on—trying to locate you!" she remarked as if it were all Jerry's fault.

Just like Frankie! Jerry was amused. "I had to move you know, had to cut down expenses."

Now it was Frankie's turn to look Jerry over and she did so with candid disapproval.

"Your new suite is hardly comme il faut!" "In fact," she said, selecting an embroidered cigarette case from the contents of her bag, "it's a terrible dump."

They were back on their old terms. With the intimacy of a former room-bought a house near Willow Grove. Up to this time they have been residing with Mrs. Buckman's mother on Walnut avenue.

The friends of Beryl Stevenson are glad to see her up and around after a recent illness.

Mrs. E. Stevenson and Mrs. M. Foster, Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Buckman, Mrs. S. Birkleback, of Torresdale Manor, and Mr. and Mrs. Ray Birklebach, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Buckman, of Byberry.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wenner and daughter, Dorothea, of Edgewood avenue, are away on their vacation.

Mrs. Sharpe, of Walnut avenue, entertained her mother on Wednesday afternoon.

PARIS sets the styles in women's dress for the world. London is the arbiter in matters of dress for men. But, New York and Chicago, Boston and San Francisco and hundreds of smaller cities and towns throughout the United States may know what are the latest styles even before they are shown in Paris.

A seeming paradox, but true. Merchants maintain representatives in Paris, London, Vienna and other European style centers who cable the latest news of the modes, and ship samples long before they are sold abroad. In America, the news is translated into advertisements and printed by local newspapers throughout the United States. And so, American women are able to dress in the latest styles in dress more accurately than the women of any other country on the face of the globe.

Advertising keeps you abreast of the times in other ways. It tells you of the newest and best in every line of merchandise. It keeps you posted on what other people are doing and wearing and using. Read the advertisements. They are truthful and helpful. You can depend on their accuracy, for the reputations of the merchants sponsoring them guarantee their integrity.

Mother and Five Children Hurt When Auto Overturns

A mother, father, and their six children, figured in an accident on the Lincoln Highway at South Langhorne, last evening, six of the eight being treated at the Harriman Hospital here for injuries.

Those hurt: Mrs. Sarah Simkins, aged 27, of 3222 East 42nd street, Brooklyn, N. Y., complete fracture of the shoulder and arm.

Louise, 8, contusions of throat and right side of neck, and ruptured blood vessel.

Betty, 2, contused wound of right knee and hand.

The father, J. Simkins, was driving the car in which members of his family were passengers to Philadelphia to visit friends. When the group reached South Langhorne one of the wheels of the car struck an object in the roadway, and the vehicle was overturned.

The father and one of the children were unhurt. The mother and Louise, 8, remained at the hospital overnight; while the others were dismissed from the institution last evening after having their wounds dressed.

EMILIE A. A. TO PLAY GERMANTOWN NINE

Tomorrow the Emilie A. A. will go up against what promises to be the toughest opposition they have met so far this season, when they take on the Germantown Artisans.

This will be the "rubber" game, as each team has come through with a victory.

Emilie won the first, 5 to 4, in a close game, whereupon the "Artisans" turned around and with Saltenberger pitching, set the "Goosetowners" down with three hits for a score of 5 to 0, the first time Emilie has been shut out since the days of the hoop-skirts.

Howard Black, who has pitched every inning for Emilie so far this season and "Dutch" Afflerbach, the slugging catcher, will be the battery as usual. "Blackie" just missed a perfect game last Sunday when he shut North Penn 5 to 0 and allowed no hits until with two out in the 9th inning the infield allowed a pop fly to fall safe back of second base.

Route 11 is followed to Staunton, also rich in historic tradition and scenic beauty. From Staunton the Robert E. Lee Trail, carries the travelers into the famous grotto country in the heart of the Shenandoah Valley. At Newmarket the countryside abounds in caverns with many underground wonders. To reach the famous Luray Cavern the tourists use U. S. Route 211 winding through Shenandoah National Park to Perryville. From here the homeward journey can be made over state route 37 to Winchester where the Lee highway is again met and followed up the Shenandoah Valley through Hagerstown to Chambersburg. From this point excellent main trunk highways can be used in completing the homeward trip.

See 'Em Ride in the Western Stampede and Rodeo at Trenton Fair

Fifty of the best cowboy and cowgirl "bronco busters" of the West will compete daily at the Trenton Fair, in the big Western stampede and rodeo, a real contest and not an exhibition, which starts Labor Day and continues all week.

The great Trenton Fair, which will open on Labor Day this year and continue until September sixth offers the most unusual feature for entertainment ever seen in the east.

A western stampede and rodeo, bringing the most daring riders of the west, a band of seventy-five Indians and many car loads of bucking horses and wild Texas steers, are a few of the elements that will contribute to the most unusual show ever witnessed by an eastern fair crowd.

The entire western contest, will be staged under regulation "rodeo" rules. The stampede is not an exhibition, it is a contest in which only those who prove their superiority on the backs of wild bucking horses will receive prizes and to date, thirty-seven of the greatest cow boys and cow girls, among which are several who have won national championships in the west, will compete.

Yak Canutt, several times winner at the nationally known Pendleton rodeo, and holder of the most coveted of all prizes for bronco riding, the Roosevelt trophy is the leading contender for honors during the six days of the Trenton Fair rodeo.

Two girls, who also can boast of having won titles for hard riding, will be seen in action. They are, Clare Belcher of Texas and Mabel Strickland of California. Both of these girls are the best known women riders and Clare Belcher in addition to being a champion rider, holds the title of world's champion woman bull dogger, races and riding in which the feather Picture if you can, a slim and attractive girl, riding at break neck speed along side of a snorting wild steer. The white clad cow girl and her horse close in upon the steer and she dives head first at the charging animal clutching him by the horns in an effort to throw the animal at the risk of her life.

If there is a more exciting contest, than this western rodeo and stampede, the management of the Trenton Fair does not know of it, for if they did they would have listed it on their 1930 program.

In addition to all the riding of wild horses, the bull dogging of steers and the trick roping contests, there will also be cow boy races, chuck wagon races and riding in which the feather decorated and paint daubed red skins will be seen every afternoon in front of the grand stand at the Trenton Fair. Although the staging of the western contest way back here in the east, has been the most expensive feature ever undertaken by the Trenton Fair Association, there is no doubt that the contest is one which will be witnessed by more people than have ever before attended this, the greatest of all eastern fairs.

The price of admission has not been advanced although in the west, the price of choice seats for this kind of a contest is often ten dollars while just general admission is never less than one dollar.

At Trenton Fair this year you can see this thrilling event for only fifty cents and few if any can afford to miss it.
